The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway. The great Trades Parade or Industrial

Exposition on the occasion of the railroad the wife and daughters of Captain John celebration at Louisville on Tuesday was a Flinn, one of the pioneer settlers of this grand affair. The Courier-Journal, in its account of the celebration, gives sketches of the railroads leading to the city. Of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway it says:

railway system of the South, has since its the country-seat was named Ballardville in completion played an important part in the progress of business. The line of the road, one of the most picturesque ones on the continent, is from Newport News, Va., via Richmond, to the Big Sandy river, with a total length of 512.07 miles, 117.57 miles of which is composed of sidings, etc. The road was formed by a consolidation, in 1868, of the Virginia Central and the Covington and Ohio railroads. The former line was first opened in 1867 to Covington, at the base of the Alleghany range, a distance of 208 miles, 50 miles from Richmond. There was included in this first line the Blue Ridge railroad, 17 miles in length, which was built by the State, and had on its line one of the finest tunnels in the country. The Covington and Ohio railroad was first undertaken by the State, the object being to extend the railroad system of the south, saine between the personals and Rriefs.

The Tarier Commission. The Chamber of Commission was adopted offering the use of their results of the Commission during their stay in the Commission during their stay in the Commission during their stay in the Commissi the object being to extend the railroad system to the Ohio river.

THE UNDERTAKING was an enormous one, and after expending considerable time and money the work on the extension was abandoned as fruitless in 1861, but was resumed again in 1868, and on March 1, 1873, the great work was com-pleted and the line finished from the waters of the Chesapeake to those of the Ohio. The road had, however, made a Ohio. The road had, however, made a default in its coupons, and a receiver was appointed October 9, 1875, and on April 2, three years later, it was sold and a new company organized under the present title, the property being conveyed on July 1, 1878. The new company expended enormous sums of money in the reconstruction of all its lines, and specific took steps to extend it on the east to the Chesapeake bay, and on the west to Memphis on the Mississippi, the whole making a line of about 927 miles, made up of the Chesapeake and Ohio, 504.20 miles, the Elizabethtown, Lexington and Big Sandy to Louisville, 132 miles, and the Chesafacilities of these consolidated lines are remarkable and of incalculable value. At Newport News, on the James river, twenty miles from the Atlantic, an enormous merchandise wharf 800 feet long has been constructed, and a grain elevator with a depth of twenty-seven feet.
